

Policy Direction – Accommodation for Employees with Disabilities

Rationale and Relationship to Mission, Principles and Values

The Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada (MS Society) strives to reflect the diversity of the greater population within the workforce including those with disabilities. The MS Society acknowledges that employees with and without disabilities can make a valuable contribution to the success of the MS Society of Canada and will be supportive of this goal.

Therefore, where an employee has a disability or develops a disability during the course of employment, the MS Society seeks to ensure that the employee remains in employment for as long as the following points apply:

- the employee's medical condition permits continuation of employment, and;
- the employee can perform the essential duties of their position, with appropriate accommodations if necessary.

To allow for the principles to be put into practice, accommodation may involve modifying the job design and content; modifying the work environment; transferring employees to different jobs for which they are qualified; offering rehabilitation programs; providing assistive devices; providing specialized training; or offering flexible hours of work or reduced hours.

Policy Objective

The MS Society will endeavour to assist employees with disabilities by providing reasonable accommodation to the employee without causing undue hardship to the Society. The objective of this policy is to attempt to identify and remove barriers that employees with disabilities may encounter, in order for them to perform the essential duties of their position, consistent with their abilities, qualifications and experience. This policy will provide administrative guidelines for employees with disabilities and their supervisors.

Policy Application

The policy applies to all MS Society employees at all levels of the organization. The policy is effective on the date of approval.

Authorization

This policy was approved by the MS Society board of directors, June 6, 1998.

Policy Details

The following statements will guide the policy:

- The employee has an obligation to inform the MS Society that accommodation is required, to cooperate in facilitating the accommodation and accept reasonable accommodation. The employee may independently make the request or a joint request may be made with the employee's supervisor.
- The employee's disability must be substantiated by medical documentation which includes details of the employee's functional capacities. The MS Society may choose to request the employee seek a second opinion and be examined by another medical practitioner of the MS Society's choice. In addition, the MS Society may request updated information from the employee and/or his/her medical practitioner from time-to-time. Monitoring with current information will enable the Society to respond to any changing needs and/or identify when the need for accommodation ends.
- Accommodation will be provided on a case-by-case basis. In the event that the employee and the direct supervisor cannot agree on appropriate accommodation, the request will be brought forward to an ad hoc committee of affected parties for consideration. The ad hoc committee may consist of the employee's supervisor, department vice-president/director, human resources manager, and the employee. Where appropriate, medical authorities and rehabilitation specialists may be consulted. Final recommendations will be brought forward to the president/executive director for approval.
- The committee will respect the confidentiality of the information received from employees and any medical practitioners regarding the employee's disabilities.
- All parties will make a reasonable attempt to implement this policy without causing undue hardship to the MS Society. It is also understood that the employer's ability to identify, properly assess and implement appropriate accommodation initiatives is dependent upon the support and input of all the other parties as outlined herein.

Definitions:

Employees with disabilities - persons, who for purposes of employment, consider themselves, or believe that a potential employer consider the disability visible or invisible, permanent or episodic (periods of wellness followed by periods of disability).

Reasonable accommodation - any adjustment necessary to ensure that a person is not disadvantaged involves adjusting the workplace to give an employee with a disability an equal opportunity to perform his or her job. Such accommodations are reasonable when they do not impose undue hardship on the employer.

Specialized training - any training necessary to ensure that an employee with a disability is not at a disadvantage for employment opportunities or is prevented from carrying out the essential components of a job because of a disability. Training could be provided either by the MS Society or by an external organization.

Undue Hardship - There is no distinctive test for determining when this point has been reached. However, factors to be considered include financial cost, health and safety requirements and interchangeability of the workforce.
